FINDS CONDITIONS IN LOCAL MARKETS NEED IMPROVEMENT

Display of Meats in Janesville Shops Is Unsanitary Says University Inspector.

Paul W. Black of the University Extension Division, who spent several days of last week in the city with the health exhibit, reports that conditions in local meat markets need improvement. After a thorough inspection Mr. Black found that a number of markets expose the meats for purposes of display in such a manner as to make the meat unsanitary. "Meat exposed in a market collects dust from the street and any other foreign matter that may accidentally fall upon it," says Mr. Black in his report. "This open display of meat also causes it to decay faster and become unfit for use. The best way to keep meat for display purposes is in a glass refrigerator. These may as well be provided as not for the protection of the health of the consumer. It is much better to keep most of the meat in the big ice box of the market and what is on display in this glass refrigerator."

A further study of the condition in the schools resulted in the discovery of 438 pupils out of 1200 examined with four or more defective teeth. Among these were also cases of abscesses and defective palates. There were 315 with tonsils and adenoids needing treatment. There were 325 with defective eyesight, six hundred and six were suffering from nervousness, enlarged glands of the neck, goitre, pediculosis, and kidney trouble.

"While many of these cases show a number of these troubles," reads the report, "yet it is safe to say that more than one-third of the pupils of Janesville need medical or dental treatment. From the enthusiasm of the advocates of medical supervision of the schools, it is evident that the conditions will be bettered in the near future. This is the only way to secure better health and results in education. Janesville is to be commended in her awakened spirit."

QUARTET OF DRUNKS IS SENTENCED FROM BELOIT

The Beloit municipal court held a busy session Tuesday morning, four Beloiters being sentenced by Judge Clark for associating too freely with John Barleycorn. The prisoners were delivered to Sheriff C. S. Whipple at the county jail last night.

John Boyes was given a ten day sentence, and he has no dependents. His wages, under the commitment law, will go to the county. George Stewart was given a like term. James Bur, who has relatives residing in Milwaukee, will work out a ten day term for his spouse. Pat Keady, a prominent wife and children residing in St. Paul, Minnesota, was given a thirty day sentence.

FORMER JANESVILLE MAN ATTACKED BY HIGHWAYMEN

Word has been received by relatives of Byron Backus, a former resident of this city that Backus was a victim of a holdup and shooting affair in Chicago Saturday night. In the fight that followed the assault Backus received a serious wound inflicted by the highwaymen and is under a surgeon's care in a Chicago hospital at the present time.

According to the letter, Backus was stopped by highwaymen on his way to work and he offered fight. In the struggle his assailant shot him and it was some time before he was found and given medical aid. During his residence in this city Backus made his home on South Third street and was machine operator in Janesville's first moving picture theatre located on South Main street.

MOLD FOR STEPS

May Be Adjusted to Different Heights for Holding Concrete.

Now that concrete plays such an important part in building operations, new molds for its use are being invented from time to time. One of the newest is the stopmold, designed by a Missouri man and shown in the illustration. A series of end pieces are connected by a vertical flange which have detachable clamps on them. In this way it is an easy matter to adjust the mold for steps of any height desired. Longitudinal face pieces are connected with the end pieces and the whole structure forms a box for the reception of concrete. It takes but a few minutes to fill this box and when the concrete has solidified, the mold may be taken apart and removed. For the making of short flights of steps, as for front doors or porches, this device is especially useful.

WE HAVE TO STAND FOR THIS—

Could Not Escape Comparison.

"Yes," said a sad-eyed man, "I married the widow of a man who was hanged, and I thought that under the circumstances there would be no comparisons in connection with the late lamented, but I was mistaken." "Did she praise him just the same?" rejoined his friend. "Well, not exactly," was the reply; "but we had not been married a week before she declared that hanging was too good for me."

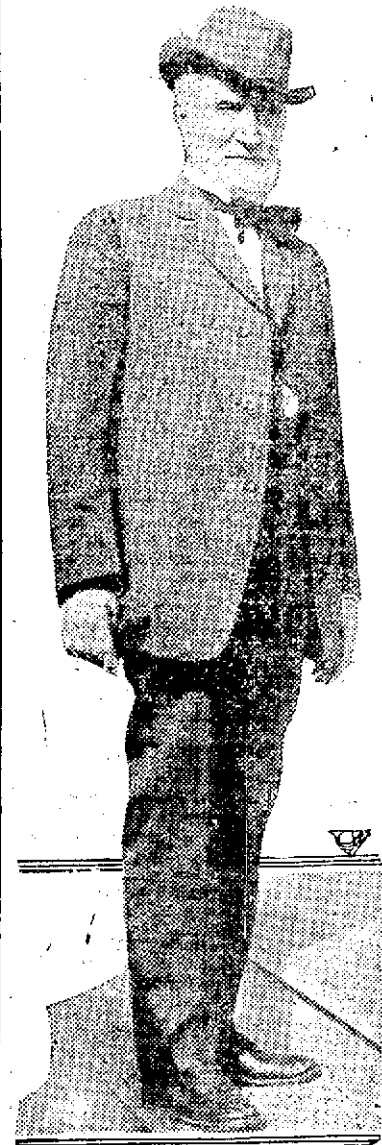

The Attraction.

A rather eccentric man, calling on a family blessed by an observant little son, wore kid gloves that had been cleaned. The little boy, seeming to be much attracted by the visitor, stayed close at his side. "You like to stand by Mr. Blank and hear his funny stories, don't you, Jimmie?" presently asked Jimmie's father. "I don't care about his stories," replied the honest youngster, "but his hands smell just like our automobile."

"I don't feel it," came the dubious answer, accompanied by thorough and noisy action of the spoon.

NOTABLE ANNIVERSARY.

Today marks the fiftieth anniversary of the dedication of the battlefield of Gettysburg and the wonderful address of Abraham Lincoln which will go down into the ages to come as one of the most memorable ever uttered. It was written by our great president as he traveled to the field to be dedicated. On the train from Washington, it was strenuous days for the President and while he doubtless had thought out his address he put it into shape on his journey. He followed Edward Everett the orator of the day, who gave a masterful three hour address and then this tall, lanky westerner rose and in a voice that was heard to the limits of the vast audience that was assembled said:

"Four score and seven years ago our fathers brought forth on this continent a new nation, conceived in liberty, and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal. Now we are engaged in a great civil war, testing whether that nation, or any nation so conceived and so dedicated, can long endure. We are met on a great battlefield of that war. We have come to dedicate a portion of that field as a final resting place for those who gave their lives that that nation might live. It is altogether fitting and proper that we should do this. But, in a larger sense, we cannot dedicate—we cannot consecrate—we cannot hallow—this ground. The brave men, living and dead, who struggled here, have consecrated it, far above our poor power to add or detract. The world will little note or long remember what we say here, but it can never forget what they did here. It is for us the living, rather, to be dedicated here to the unfinished work which they who fought here, have thus far so nobly advanced. It is rather for us to be here dedicated to the great task remaining before us—that from these honored dead we take increased devotion to that cause for which they gave the last full measure of devotion; that we here highly resolve that these dead shall have not died in vain; that this nation, under God, shall have a new birth of freedom; and that government of the people, by the people, for the people, shall not perish from the earth."

Few realized then that they had heard one of the masterpieces of literature. It was not until they read it in print, studied it, did they understand it. Everett's address had been masterful, scholarly and polished. It showed much time and attention but these few words of Lincoln's will live long after Everett's name is forgotten.

AMERICAN RATS.

It is estimated that the rat population of this country is 500,000,000, which on a per capita basis means five rats for every human being. The claim is also made that it costs seven dollars and thirty cents a year to feed every member of this numerous family.

The State of Indiana is the first state in the Union to organize a campaign of extermination, and this is carried on through the public schools. The Technical World has this to say about it: "Under the supervision of Dr. J. N. Hurty of the State Board of Health, the rat and its relation to the destruction of property and health are to be studied in all the public schools throughout the state. A section of the law now makes it the duty of school and health authorities to provide charts, textbooks, etc., in order to carry out the details of the plan in a most efficient manner. Dr. Hurty's rat chart is to be placed in every schoolroom, and every teacher is provided with an interesting pamphlet which outlines the life story of the rat, and in such a simple and direct manner that any child can understand. Instructions in how to make buildings and dwellings 'rat-proof' will also be given. The people are in earnest. Failure to teach this subject in the schools is punishable with a fine of from ten to twenty-five dollars. All this, of course, is only one phase of the question and of what Indiana intends to do. The important thing to bear in mind is the fact that there is one state in the Union with sufficient foresight and 'awareness' to know a menace when it sees one, and to take present steps and far-seeing ones both for the present and coming generations. The last session of the Indiana State Legislature made all this possible, but not without some thought and some struggle on the part of somebody."

CO-OPERATIVE FORESTS.

The forest service of the United States department of agriculture makes the following suggestions that various states should co-operate with forest owners relative to the protection of forest reserves. The suggestion takes the following form that in addition to the administration of its waste lands for forest purposes, the individual state should play a part in co-operating with private timberland owners, commensurate with the interest which the state has in maintaining its timber supply. This principle is enunciated by the committee on state forestry at the national conservation congress here. The committee further recommends as general principles for the practice of state forestry everywhere that the governing board should be removed from partisan political control, and that the state forester should be fitted for his work by professional training and experience.

Civil service should govern in the selection of all forest officers, and all industries directly dependent on the forests should be represented on the state forestry board. Further, the committee says, the forest officers should have ample discretionary power, and should be delegated enough authority to settle controversies as they arise.

After an organization is formed it should be provided with machinery which will make its work effective, such as ample funds, a sufficient force, prompt and effective measures against forest vandalism, and a strong police power. Without including all these things, the committee says, state legislation will fall of its purpose and largely be a dead letter.

PRESS COMMENT.

Profession Needs Encouragement. Teachers' salaries are exempt under the federal income law. No doubt this is because teachers get wages, not a salary and certainly not an income.—Milwaukee Sentinel.

The Logic of Epithet. The outlook for currency legislation is brighter. The whole pack of Tory organs, east and west, are again in full cry after Bryan.—Milwaukee Journal.

Domestic Diplomacy. The woman who can get the furnace attended to regularly without straining domestic relations is entitled to rank as a diplomat.—Milwaukee Journal.

"Everybody's Doing It." Anyhow Adam did not charge his fall to the "system," but he did charge it to the woman whom Thon gaves me. The same plan of defense, but in a different form, both showing the disposition to dodge personal responsibility and put the blame on somebody else. The "system" is bad, and the original woman seems to have had a distressingly strong disposition to start something in the line of excitement, but neither of these abolishes personal excuse for crime.

Caustic and Cutting. "Everybody's doing it"—"Do!" what? Squirming and wiggle-waggle contortions of course! Dancing used to be an art; now it is a squirm. Dancers wiggle; they squirm; they squeeze; they hug; and the dancer who can squirm and hug and wiggle and squeeze the most conspicuously is the best dancer in the crowd.

Our public dances are nothing more or less than public begging matches. Of course this is not true among the refined people. They dance with grace and dignity. Even the most suggestive dances, when performed with dignity, might be tolerable. But we complain of the public dances where a girl of sixteen or eighteen sits in a chair, and in the arms of some male animal while both wiggle madly around the floor to the tune of "When you alone tonight," or some equally prurient, suggestive song.

There is room for a valuable work in elevating some of the modern dances—also some of the modern dancers.—Racing Journal News.

Waking Up to It. We have learned to set type, make up the forms, feed the presses, and do all the different kinds of work in the office but have not yet acquired enough speed to print four pages in one week. There is an immense amount of work in printing a newspaper.—Orfordville Journal.

Heart to Heart Talks

By CHARLES N. LURIE

FOR HERSELF ALONE.

Close to the shore of Long Island, N. Y., lies a small island which is one of the earth's garden spots. Within its boundaries are found hill and dale and greenward, and its shores are indented with beautiful bays.

In the heart of the island, which might be called Comfort Island (that is not its real name), dwells a maiden lady who has passed the meridian of life and who is very wealthy. She lives on an estate in the most beautiful part of pretty Comfort Island.

She lives alone, for all her kinfolk are dead.

Her estate consists of hundreds of acres of land, well cultivated and adorned with all that the art of the best gardeners can give.

But the maiden lady lives there alone.

Her house is a century and a half old or older. It is a storehouse of fine things—of paintings and porcelains, of old silver and pewter, made in the older days of art, and of mahogany furniture which would be the delight of artists.

It is for the lady herself—and for no one else.

She has friends, and they have never set foot in her house. Once a year she permits her fellow church members to hold a harvest festival in one corner of her grounds, but forbids them access to the major portion of the beautiful gardens. And of course the house itself is sacred ground, into which no one but her servants and herself may enter.

At all other times manservants warn the stranger away from her gates. He may not even look at the gardens, which are hidden from the highway by high hedges.

Why the seclusion? The lady is proud, very proud, of her family and her beautiful home. She will not defile the house by permitting the foot of the stranger therein.

A sad mistake! He who shares the world gains it. He who wishes to keep it for himself loses it.

Would she not live a better life, enjoy her home more, if she threw it open freely to her friends, even if sometimes she asked the poor to come in and share in its beauties? So many starve for one taste of the things which she has in abundance!

Are you like this woman? Do you keep shut up for yourself alone the good things of your life? Why not add to them and give to your enjoyment of them a higher, better zest by sharing them with the poor?

By way of contrast to this wealthy woman think of Mrs. Emily J. Shepard (Helen Gould), who invites to her beautiful home at Irvington, N. Y., the poor children of the New York slums.

On the Spur of the Moment

Let 'Em Alone. There's no use layin' down the rules for women's dress.

We guess. No use to slam the clinking gown. Or on the six-foot plumes to frown. A feller might as well keep still by word of mouth or with a quill. Why at the fashions' fume and curse?

They might be worse. And doubtless will. A man may argue all the day. His wife will dress the stylish way. Just the same. So be game.

For you only waste your time. When you call a gown a crime. She will reach you for the pelt And will dress to suit herself; Nothing you can say will stop her. Even if you called a copier. She would simply flash a smile And would say: "It is the style." So it goes. With her clothes.

All the while. Just let her have her own way. And you'll find that it will pay; She will have it anyhow. You must allow.

According to Uncle Abner. Rev. Hudnutt, pastor of the Hard Shell church, is going to start a crusade agin' gambling in this man's town. Last Sunday he found nine ten poker clubs in the contribution plates and 67 cents in real money. He says he wouldn't mind it so

Miss Amy Pringle is embroiling a needle for Elmer Jones' Christmas present, and Elmer is thinking of leaving for parts unknown a few days before that happy holiday. He says something like that has happened to spoil every Christmas during the past ten years. Rev. Hudnutt was preachin' on hell in the Hard Shell pulpit when Frank Tunnus went to sleep and tipped over backwards agin the stove. His celluloid collar ketches fire and there was a panic. Everybody jumped out'n the windows, thinking, from the smell, that the pastor's sermon had come true.

Hickoryville Items. The feller that named the Pullman cars and the one that named the towns in Nicaragua must have been one and the same.

Amos Hitts, our popular undertaker, also livery, feed and sales stables, says that people in this vicinity don't seem to get up and take an interest in life until after they are a hundred years old. Amos has been haulin' wood in the hearse this fall as usual, trade bein' very slack. There was some promise of a funeral long ago, but when Amos Hitts called on the feller, he said, but Constable Ezra Harkins interfered. Amos says the constable is a meddler and ought to learn to keep his nose out'n other people's business.

Bill of Rights.

The bill of rights is a declaration of fundamental principles deemed basic to the Constitution itself and borrowed from the English bill of rights of 1689. When the Constitution of the United States was framed and submitted to the people it did not have a bill of rights and it was so harshly criticized on this account that its friends promised to incorporate or add such a declaration, and the first ten amendments to the Constitution, made after the main instrument was adopted, were in fulfillment of this promise. All the State Constitutions now have bills of rights, practically identical with one another.

Simple Cement.

For mending ornaments and delicate china there is nothing better than rice-flour cement. It is very easily made, it being only necessary to mix rice flour or ground rice thoroughly with cold water, simmering gently over a slow fire until it thickens, thereby forming a most durable adhesive substance which can be used hot or cold, in the usual way.

Convict's Pet Mouse.

On completion of a three years' sentence, a convict has left Peterhead penitentiary, Aberdeenshire, Scotland, accompanied by the companion of his imprisonment, a brown mouse. He caught it while working in the quarries shortly after his arrival at Peterhead. The mouse shared its captor's meals, and in 12 months had learned a variety of tricks, such as eating out of the convict's hand and sitting up at the word of command.

Daniel Frohman presents
in a tense dramatic play,
"HIS NEIGHBOR'S WIFE"

It is an honor exceeded only by a surpassing degree of pleasure to announce the presentation of Lillie Langtry, the distinguished emotional actress, and the famous favorite of two continents, in a thrilling motion picture entitled, "HIS NEIGHBOR'S WIFE." Lillie Langtry's individuality and vital dramatic force are to well and widely known to require an extended description. "His Neighbor's Wife" will go down in history as one of Mrs. Langtry's greatest characterizations, and will become a tradition in the world of creative art.

The gripping story teems with intense suspense and appeal, and is indicated without exaggeration or histrionic hysterics. The plot may be considered bold, even daring, but it conveys a serious message and possesses an effective moral. The theme is as old as the world, but as new as today. It reaches the heights and depths of humanity. It is a slice of life.

Lillie Langtry's art makes the film preach a powerful sermon!

Tied Boot Too Tight. Tying his boot too tight caused a farmer, named Lyons, death at Ashgrove, near Mallow, County Cork, Ireland, recently. The man was tying his boot in the yard of his house preparatory to going to work when a vein burst in his leg, and although efforts were made to stop the flow of blood, death ensued in half an hour.

Sport Snap Shots

The one royal road to a career as a batter of ability, says Larry Lajoie, is a perfect pair of lungs. There are lots of other things to be desired. Plenty of nerve, intelligence and strength enter into it, but the largest item is a couple of lungs that can knock the track of the fast speedster. Lajoie says that he believes that he has as fine a pair of lungs as mortal man was blessed with and he gives them most all the credit for his wonderful career as a hitter. He realized early in the game how valuable they were to him and has given them the greatest care ever since. He seldom reads at night or on a fast moving train. He takes care to get plenty of sleep. And his advice to young batsmen is to avoid too much reading and save their eyes. He cites the instances of several promising young players who have practically ruined their batting eyes through too much reading. And one young player in particular, who had shown great promise, gradually lost out and dropped from fast company simply through too much reading. He had been a great little hitter, but was fond of books and after becoming an inveterate reader his batting fell so much that he couldn't stick in the big show. Which may explain in a way why some of our best ball players are not as well lettered as they ought to be.

Fielder Jones, the old White Sox manager, is one of the very few baseball stars who have quit the game while in their prime. And perhaps it might be said that he is the only manager who quit the business entirely on his own account. When Fielder brought the Chicago Cubs to the White Sox through and would never appear on the baseball lot again, Commy was the most startled person in the world. Commy made some very generous in-

THREE TEAMS LEFT IN STATE TO PLAY FOR BADGER TITLE

Oshkosh, Madison and Sparta on Equal Terms for Big Annual Fight—Championship Will Be Decided.

Three teams now face each other in the high school football world of Wisconsin, as being on equal terms for claiming the high school football championship. They are Oshkosh, Madison and Sparta. In the north, Madison is ignored, and especially by the Oshkosh eleven. The team should be given a chance for final honors. Madison should be that team this year. They have an aggregation who are by far the best set of players in the northern section of the state. They have a wonderful scoring machine, one that cannot be equalled in the state. Oshkosh and Sparta are good ground gainers, but have lacked the push to run up high scores. Madison's showing against Beloit, a strong contender in this section of the state, was marvelous, and their strength against the two northern teams would be perhaps too much for them in a championship contest. Madison should be given a chance, say the least. If they refuse to play Oshkosh, as they did last year, then their claim is to be thrown aside and Sparta and Oshkosh should fight it out, the winner being the recognized champions of Wisconsin.

Last Saturday's games weeded out these three only contenders. Oshkosh plucked away at Ashland, until she scored one touchdown, winning 6 to 0, in a raged game. Chippewa Falls fell before the strong Sparta eleven by a 20 to 0 score. Madison showed wonderful form by trouncing North Division, Milwaukee, the strongest of the Cream City elevens, 24 to 0, after being defeated by West Division, by a 14 to 13 score earlier in the year. Other games in the state are not worthy of mention, when talking about the title situation. Wausau trimmed Jefferson 42 to 0, but are in no way related to the championship goal. Beloit walloped Monroe, 46 to 0.

On next Saturday Oshkosh and Sparta meet for the title of northern Wisconsin. These two elevens have already met on the 1913 gridiron, the score being 0 to 0, at the end of the former conflict. Sparta seems to have the better eleven, by comparative scores, but this year, with the game so completely changed, and various elevens playing different styles of football, scores are not dependable in testing the strength of teams. Oshkosh are five times champions of Wisconsin, and expect to make it six this year. Whoever wins Saturday, whether it be Sparta or Oshkosh, it would be the right and proper course to take to have Madison meet the winner on Turkey day or the following Saturday for the state championship.

Captain Dickerson and his team who have entered the bonds of matrimony, rolled a total of 2,248, while the singles, led by Captain Finerman totaled 2,188. Osborn, who turned the tide for the married men, was high man with an average of 189. On Thursday night the Janesville Pure Milk team will clash with the Golden Eagle five.

HIGH SCHOOL ELEVEN MUST DEFEAT MONROE

Janesville Should Win 20 to 0 in Game on Local Gridiron Saturday—Fear a Slump is Near.

The trouble with the Janesville high school football eleven is a hard matter to explain. They have won but one game this season, and all season they have had as good material as any of the opponents they have met. The idea that they don't play together seems to be the thought of a good share of the students. Another idea is that hard luck has been the cause. The latter has been extremely noticeable most of the year. If they do not defeat Monroe this week there will be something more radically wrong than has not been found out as yet. Beloit defeated Monroe 46 to 0, while the locals were defeated by the Linc City 25 to 0. Edgerton defeated Monroe 14 to 0, and was winner over Janesville 42 to 0. Janesville's improvement has been shown, especially in practice, while in a game they go all to pieces. They should have defeated both Jefferson and Stoughton in the last two games. Their record follows, and the school hope that the basketball five will establish a better string of wins than the football eleven have set up. Janesville, 0; Edgerton, 42. Had the Last Word.
Two ladies, during a friendly meeting on the street, got to quarrelling about their ages, and used very strong language toward each other. At last, as if to end the dispute, one of them turned away and said in a very conciliatory tone of voice: "Let us not quarrel over the matter any more. I, at least, have not the heart to do it. I never knew who my mother was; she deserted me when a baby, and who knows but that you may have been the heartless parent?"

GERMANY SCHULTZ IS AIDING BADGER LINE

With Return of Assistant Coach Wisconsin Turn Prospects From Gloom to Joy—Sure of Victory.

ISPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.
Madison, Wis., Nov. 13.—Football prospects have gone up so high since Germany Schultz's return as assistant coach that to the enthusiastic fans the conflict with the Maroons Saturday no longer looks dubious. The big Michigan star arrived in Madison Monday and was out for the first practice as soon as he landed. He appeared in a football suit, and inspired a world of confidence in the team by jumping into the fight with his old style of work, instructing the men in meeting certain plays.

Although Captain Tandberg and Ray Lange have been out of practice the last few days, they reappeared on the field this week and expect to start the game on Saturday. Added hope vests in the fact that Des Jardien, center of the Maroons, may not be able to play, for he was hurt badly in the Minnesota game and has been using crutches since. Following a long practice yesterday afternoon, there will be no more scrimmage for the varsity. Signal drill will be followed today and possibly Thursday. The team will leave for Chicago Thursday evening, and will probably engage in regular signal drill there on Friday. The largest crowd that ever accompanied a football team to Chicago

COMMENDS YALE'S ATTEMPT TO SECURE COACH TEN EYCK

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]
Madison, Wis., Nov. 13.—In the opinion of Coach "Dad" Vail of the University of Wisconsin crews, Yale has made the best possible move in seeking Coach James A. Ten Eyck of Syracuse. "Ten Eyck will have much opposition at first," said Vail, "because of the system of graduate coaching that is allowed, but I think he can soon shut down on the outside interference. If he takes charge there will be a general shakeup and he will run things himself. He will substitute the American stroke for the much criticized English stroke that is now used. Yale has needed an American professional coach for some time and Ten Eyck will be the best man she can get." Ten Eyck was the main responsible for Syracuse's victory in the varsity eight-oared race on the Hudson last summer. His son was formerly rowing coach at Wisconsin.

SHOPIERE

Sho-piere, Nov. 19.—The annual Harvest Festival held at the Congregational church on Friday evening was a pleasant one, attended by an unusually large audience. Mr. Crawford of Beloit College, and the choir entertained the company with splendid selections of readings and songs. The Ladies' Aid realized about $20 from the proceeds of the New England supper.

News of the death of Mrs. A. Myers of Tiffany reached here Sunday. She was visiting at the home of her daughter in Washington.

Mr. Joyce, the Shopiere depot agent has been transferred from the local office here, to become inspector of suburban service out of Chicago.

Miss Adele Smith of Clinton spent several days last week with her aunt, Mrs. S. J. Dockstader.

C. D. Fitch of Avalon was a visitor at J. P. Atkinson's Monday.

Mrs. Crawford and three small sons attended the Congregational church Sunday morning.

Dr. Eaton and Lester Butler enjoyed an illustrated lecture on the Panama Canal and district at Beloit last Friday evening.

body and everything are sources of pleasant wonder to her on tour and during working hours behind the scenes, and her life at all times is like that of a happy bird. She is a mysterious peace-maker as well as merry-maker, and no matter what the quarrel may be or between whom it may be raging her mere appearance on the scene of argument is the signal for the restoration of peace and quiet. Phoe Soy always speaks of the gods, and is as gentle and beautiful as the tenderest mortals can picture. So much of her social side, Miss Russell hopes to make her equally charming as a professional later on. Phoe Soy plays angelic melodies on the piano, sings with a heavenly voice, and her general presence evokes a personal magnetism that will soften and soothe every heart in the audience. Phoe Soy is seventeen years of age and at the conclusion of the present American tour the dainty Oriental daughter will be sent to Paris by Miss Russell.

"QUO VADIS PICTURES." "Quo Vadis," that marvelous photodrama spectacle that has made the producer, Mr. George Kleine, already famous on this continent, and which has thrilled vast audiences week after week in New York, Chicago, Boston and Philadelphia and various other cities, is announced at the Myers Theater for an engagement of three days beginning Thursday, November 20, with matinees every day. That a rare treat is in store for local amusement seekers is a foregone conclusion as such wonderful patronage and praise that has been bestowed upon this attraction cannot be without merit.

Many ministers and priests have been noticeable in the audience particularly in New York and Chicago, and all have given the entertainment their unqualified approval and endorsement. Some of the pictures are more than inspiring and imbue the spectator with an unbounded rever-ance for things that are sacred and spiritual. According to all accounts, one of the most striking figures among the great list of actors is the character of Peter. It would be hard to find another player who so perfectly realizes the general conception of this noble man. The features of the actor are perfect for the part and could not have been better had they been chiseled out of marble or painted specially for the production. His acting is at all times in keeping with the beauty of the character and many critics have pronounced the picture where he is preaching to the Christians in the cave, the most artistic and inspiring of the whole wonderful group. And certainly no scene ever pictured or portrayed upon the stage is more impressive or carries stronger weight for good, than that incident where the figure of Christ appears to Peter and commands him to return to Rome. It is a splendid specimen of dissolving photography and only one of a remarkable group. In fact, it is said, there are so many great scenes in this glorious photo drama production of "Quo Vadis" it is difficult to pick out any one to praise more than the other.

Knowledge.

Knowledge is like the coin of exchange. A man is justified, to a degree, in taking pride in its possession, if he himself worked over the gold of it and tried to coin it, or, at least, if he came by it honestly, already tested out. DINNER

By GEORGE FITCH, Author of "At Good Old Siwash."

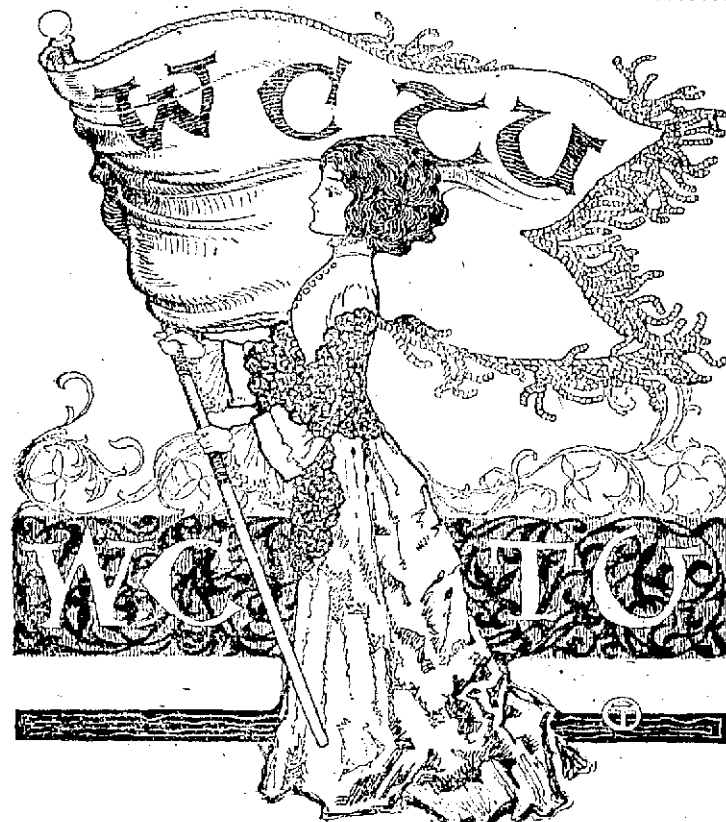

DINNER is the process of laying in enough fuel to keep the human machine steamed up until supper or breakfast, as the case may be.

In some layers of society dinner comes after breakfast; in others before. Some people eat dinner in evening clothes and spend the night digesting it; others eat dinner in their shirt sleeves and go back to work at once.

In fact, the great Chinese wall of society lies between the people who dine at night and those who eat dinner at noon. Dining at night is more fun than eating dinner at noon, but it is also more dangerous. All the expensive watering places in the world are full of people who are getting cured of the effects of eating dinner at night. There are few more delightful processes than that of acquiring digestion in this manner.

Dinner varies from a duty to a ceremony. A dinner that is a duty can be shovelled down in ten minutes if elbows are propped securely on the table, and the eater's knife does not slip at a critical point and cut off his features. A dinner that is a ceremony lasts from 7:30 p. m. until the hostess can't stand it any longer. It sometimes keeps a dozen cooks busy all day preparing a dinner for half a dozen people to be eaten in the evening, but if the housewife can get the potatoes peeled and in the water by eleven o'clock in the

MAMMA, DADDY AND THE CHILDREN CAN ALL TAKE "CALIFORNIA SYRUP OF FIGS."

Harmless "fruit laxative" cleanses the stomach, liver and bowels without any griping.

A delicious cure for constipation, biliousness, sick headache, sour stomach, indigestion, coated tongue, saltiness—like "California Syrup of Figs." For the cause of all this distress lies in a torpid liver and sluggish bowels.

A tablespoonful tonight means all constipation, poison, waste matter, fermenting food and sour bile gently moved out of your system by morning without griping. Please don't think of "California Syrup of Figs" as a physic. Don't think you are drugging yourself or your children, because this delicious fruit laxative can not cause injury. Even a delicate child can take it as safely as a robust man. It is the most harmless, effective stomach, liver and bowel regulator and tonic ever devised.

Your only difficulty may be in getting the genuine; so ask your druggist for a 50 cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs." Say to your druggist, "I want only that made by the California Fig Syrup Company." This city has many counterfeit "fig syrups," so watch out.

morning she can generally get a twelve o'clock dinner on the table by the time the noon whistle blows. Evening dinners are very delicious, and many people spend about a sixth of their lives eating them, and another sixth later on recovering. A man usually pays for his own dinner if he eats it at noon. But there are men who eat evening dinners at the home of friends day after day for years and it never costs them anything except perhaps a couple of dollars a night for taxi fare. It is the aim of all men to become so successful that they can in time eat dinner in the evening and spend until ten a. m. the next day getting over it. And the easiest way to rise to these heights is to eat dinner at noon and spend the afternoon and the next morning working hard for enough appetite to tackle another meal.

INTEREST IS SHOWN IN DRAMATIC CLUB

Officers Are Named at Meeting Last Night and Tentative Plans Outlined.

Success marked the first meeting of the newly formed Janesville Dramatic Club, held last evening at the city hall. Despite the inclement weather conditions twenty responded to the call and elected the following officers to conduct the work: President, Frank Hayes; first vice president, Miss Mary Buckmaster; second vice president, W. Carle; secretary, Miss Hazel Willey; treasurer, Miss Mabel Greenman. Mrs. Jarlet B. Day was named as director of the organization.

The object of the club is to conduct a study of the higher class of dramas and to familiarize the members with the modern staging of the better plays. With the reading of plays before the club it is hoped that the members will gain sufficient knowledge of the drama to give an intelligent criticism on the staging of the popular plays presented in this city. The club is also equipped with the stage stars and to present local talent productions is another aim of the club.

Over forty have enrolled as members. It is hoped that the membership will reach near the hundred mark as the work will undoubtedly prove highly interesting under the leadership of Mrs. Day. On Tuesday of the coming week a constitution and by-laws will be placed before the members and business matters relative to the future and further perfection of the organization will be given attention.

At last night's meeting a general discussion was held on the subjects of "The Theatre One Hundred Years Ago," the play "Within the Law," and "The Second Mrs. Tanqueray." At the next meeting five male members of the club will present the first act of "The Second Mrs. Tanqueray."

ORFORDVILLE

Mrs. Carrie Sornio has been engaged by A. Welburg at the restaurant and will look after the culinary needs of the patrons of that institution in the future.

J. J. Cunningham of Janesville was in Orfordville on Tuesday.

Miss Julia Hendrickson, who has been spending the past four months in Dakota, returned to Orfordville on Saturday evening.

It is rumored that several passengers on the evening train, within the past few days, have had a very narrow escape from falling into the clutches of the law. The conductor seems to be determined to stamp out the practice of carrying liquor on persons. His action will meet with the approval of all lovers of common decency.

While watching a game of ball at school on Tuesday morning, the little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. O. Roen was struck by a baseball. A bat from the hands of a careless batter was thrown striking her in the face, cutting a deep gash just below the left eye. Fortunately the eye was uninjured. The little sufferer was brought to the office of Dr. Forbush, who closed the wound and made her as comfortable as possible.

Hasley Christenson and Fred Weiss returned from their northern hunting trip on Tuesday and as an indication of their excellence as hunters each brought a good sized deer. In addition to this Christenson brought a large hawk and had failed to bring him to his deadly aim. It was said that the hunting season is only of so short duration.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Grenawalt are enjoying a visit from relatives from near Wilkes Barre, Pennsylvania.

BUILDERS' EXCHANGE
WILL BE ORGANIZED

Local Contractors Plan to Maintain a Public Exhibit of All Sorts of Building Materials.

Janesville contractors, material men, and those interested in the building industry, plan to furnish the city with a permanent exhibit of building materials to that prospective house and factory builders can be shown everything for the construction work from the brick for the foundation and walls, to tile and slate for the roof.

Thirty Janesville construction men met last evening and formed what is to be known as the "Builders' Exchange." They will conduct an exhibition room in the past the carle work over Ziegler's clothing store. At last night's meeting the organization was perfected and it is expected that the exchange will embrace over fifty Janesville contractors as members. The idea of having a city exhibit room originated in Milwaukee and A. E. Millies, manager of the Milwaukee display and his assistant, E. C. Schuman, advised the Janesville men, who were in favor of the plan and named George Davis as manager of the Janesville exhibit.

Invitations will be sent out to all prospective builders to inspect the exhibit in the display room before they begin construction work. It is planned to give information about all the materials that the dealers and contractor have on exhibition and let the buyers choose for themselves.

The proposed Builders' Exchange room will be equipped with everything that is used in building a home and the demonstration will call attention to the respective uses and costs of various materials, allowing the buyer to form his own opinions and place his order accordingly. The exhibit will undoubtedly prove of great value to Janesville, as the average householder is not sufficiently versed in construction work to be able to use good judgment in his purchasing.

As the contractor is representing the entire city's building men, the plan is for the education of the buyer only. The Janesville men will complete their progressive step by equipping the room for the instruction of the public within a limited space of time.

OVER HALF OF ALL SICKNESS CAUSED BY WEAKENED, CLOGGED-UP KIDNEYS

Hundreds Suffer From Kidney Trouble and Don't Know It. Backache, Bladder Disorders and Rheumatism Is Result.

It is a well recognized fact among physicians today that a greater part of all sickness can be avoided by keeping the kidneys working properly.

This is even more important than for the bowels to move regularly.

The kidneys and bladder are the filters and sewers of the body, and they must filter the blood and keep it pure. When they fail to do this properly, you suffer with pains in the back or sides, have bladder disorders, lumbago, rheumatism, dizziness, nervousness, or feel tired and worn out. If you have any such symptoms, neglect yourself another day. Secure an original package of Croxone which costs but a trifle, take three doses a day, for a few days, and you will be surprised how entirely different you will feel.

This new effective preparation soaks right in and cleans out the clogged up, inactive kidneys, so that they can filter out all the poisonous waste matter and uric acid and keep the blood pure.

Croxone is truly a remarkable remedy for the prompt relief of kidney and bladder disorders. You will find it entirely different from anything you have ever used. It is so quick-acting and effective when prepared, that it is practically impossible to take it without results.

Every druggist recommends it, and is authorized to return the purchase price if Croxone fails to give the desired results the very first time you use it.

Miss Fern Cook enjoyed a visit from her sister of Beloit one day recently.

DISCUSS PROBLEMS OF FARM AND BANK

Members of Baptist Men's Club Enjoy Addresses by Noyes Raessler and S. M. Smith.

Farming and banking, occupations now in the forefront of public attention, were discussed at the monthly meeting of the Baptist Men's Club last evening. Noyes Raessler of Beloit and S. M. Smith, cashier of the Merchants and Savings bank, considered the banking situation, with special reference to the currency bill. Both addresses proved intensely interesting.

Mr. Raessler paid special attention to the question of an agricultural representative for Rock county explaining the need for such a demonstrator and telling something of the work which he would do. That farmers as a class are woefully ignorant of some of the most fundamental problems of scientific farming was pointed out with a few illustrations. In the matter of alfalfa, for example, farmers have repeatedly failed for the simple reason that they have not recognized the fact that alfalfa will not grow on acid soils. Lime treatment is necessary to put the land in shape, and in some cases the farmer has made the mistake of applying slaked lime.

Mr. Raessler contended that many farmers were unable to understand what they read in agricultural college bulletins and pamphlets sent out from the government or agricultural schools, though the majority of them were eager and anxious to learn. What they need is some one who will take the trouble to investigate the conditions on their farms and then give them suggestions and advice first hand.

Pointing to the experience of Northern Wisconsin counties, Mr. Raessler declared that the yields in those sections where demonstrators have been employed have been increased in many cases a fourth.

In addition to traveling about the county interviewing farmers and giving help and advice, the demonstrator should be in the school houses arousing interest in the various agricultural problems. Mr. Raessler felt sure that the interest was being aroused in Rock County and that in another year the county board would be ready to establish a demonstrator in Rock county.

Mr. Smith in discussing banking problems and the currency bill, explained the present banking system in the United States pointing to its advantages and its defects and then reviewed the principal provisions of the proposed law noting how it aimed at a remedy.

One of the main defects in our banking system as at present organized, according to Mr. Smith, is the decentralization of reserves. While the independent system has worked out most advantageously the lack of concentration of bank reserves in times of a crisis has been a very serious problem. The other inherent defect is the inelasticity of our currency which remains practically stationary and is therefore unresponsive to the needs of business. The independent treasury system by which the government deposits are withheld from circulation is another serious drawback.

The Glass-Owen bill, said Mr. Smith, divided the country into twelve federal reserve districts, which member banks think is too large a number. The bill requires all national banks to become members subscribing twenty per cent of their capital stock. All the regional reserve banks are to be governed by the federal reserve board of seven members who are given large powers. They have the right to examine the reserve banks, compel rediscout and supervise the re-issuing on notes. The question of rediscouting is one of the big problems but is calculated to reduce much of the inconvenience of the present decentralized reserves, as it will allow for expansion of credit at a time when money is needed to move the crop and tide over business losses at crucial times.

That the proposed bill, although it has numerous defects, is a step in the right direction, was Mr. Smith's contention. His exposition of the subject was clear and concise indicating a thorough knowledge of the subject.

PROVED AN UNSAFE BANK

After secreting his gold and silver in sacks of corn in his barn, a wealthy landowner at Angleur-Sous-Dun, Saone-et-Loire, France, forgotful of his savings, recently sent the corn to the village mill to be ground into flour. The result was that all his treasure was ground to a powder. He had a profound mistrust of banks.

Words of Praise For Mayr's Wonderful Stomach Remedy.

"How thankful we are to you for getting in this wonderful Remedy. My wife could not have but a short time to live if she not taken your wonderful Remedy. When she did, she was cured of those paroxysms which she was having. Now she is free from all pain, for both heart trouble and from that distressing Neuralgia. All the results of five treatments and the expulsion of five hundred Gall Stones. Now she is able to eat anything she wants and her appetite is good and before taking your medicine she had no appetite and when she ate anything she would suffer death for she could not sleep at night. Since taking your treatment she sleeps well all night long. T. A. Neill, Koonoke, Texas."

"The above letter should convince you more than anything we could say in behalf of Mayr's Wonderful Stomach Remedy. Sufferers should try one dose of this Remedy—one dose should convince them that they can be restored to health. Stops Falling Hair

Hall's Hair Renewer certainly stops falling hair. No doubt about it whatever. You will surely be satisfied.

WHY DRUGGISTS RECOMMEND

Vinol for Run-Down People.

If any one person should know the value of medicines it is the druggist who dispenses them and from our experience we want to say if people in this vicinity only knew the value of Vinol, our delicious cod liver and iron tonic (without oil) at this season of the year, we would not be able to supply the demand.

This is because Vinol is a combination of the two most world famed tonics, namely, the medicinal curative elements of cod's livers without the oil, and iron for the blood.

Vinol tones up the digestive organs, purifies, and enriches the blood, promotes healthful sleep and a normal appetite.

Old people, delicate children, run-down, overworked and tired women, should try a bottle of Vinol with the understanding that your money will be returned if it does not help you. Smith Drug Co., Druggists, Jansville, Wis.

P. S.: For Pimples and Blemishes try our Saxo Salve. We guarantee it.

CONFIRMED PROOF

Residents of Jansville Cannot Doubt What Has Been Twice Proved.

In gratitude for relief from aches and pains of bad backs—from distressing kidney ills—thousands have publicly recommended Doan's Kidney Pills. Residents of Jansville, who so testified years ago, now say the results were permanent. This testimony doubly proves the worth of Doan's Kidney Pills to Jansville kidney sufferers.

Mrs. Mohns, 310 N. Academy St. Jansville, Wis., says: "I was suffering from an attack of kidney trouble. I went to the People's Drug Co., and got a supply of Doan's Kidney Pills. One or two boxes cured the ailments. I haven't had any sign of the trouble since. Others of my family have used Doan's Kidney Pills with very satisfactory results."

A LASTING CURE. On July 2, 1912, when Mrs. Mohns was interviewed she said: "I had never had any trouble from my kidneys since Doan's Kidney Pills cured me several years ago. I willingly give you permission to continue publishing my former statement."

THE MARSHAL

By MARY RAYMOND SHIPMAN ANDREWS

Author of The Perfect Tribute The Better Treasure, Etc.

"Big little" Pietro had to be told what had happened and how the general was now to be a father to him as best he might, and Alixe and Francois would be his sister and brother. He took the blow dumbly and went about his studies next morning, but for many days he could not play, and only Francois could make him speak. He clung to the other boy, and seemed to find his best comfort in the friendship which he had been his father's parting instruction to assure for him. He was handsome—extraordinarily handsome—and a lovable good child, but slow in initiative. Where Francois was friends with all the world, steady-going, where the peasant boy was brilliant. Between the two, of such contrasting types, was an unspoken bond from the first, and at this age it seemed to be the friendship which he had everything to give. Smaller physically, weaker in muscle than the big-boned son of North Italy, he yet took quite naturally an attitude of protection and defiance, and Pietro accepted it without hesitation. There was no jealousy between them. Francois laughed the other, who had grown up petted but untrained in the lonely castle of his ancestors, all that he knew of boyish strength and, and was enchanted when his pupil went beyond him as happened where brute force counted. Yet Francois was the acknowledged leader.

Father Alixe complained, "Pietro will not try to knock Francois down. Pietro is big, yet it is always Francois who comes up behind him and throws him on the grass, and Pietro only smiles and gets up. Make Pietro be brave and quick as Francois."

"Either of my boys is brave enough enough for you, who are only a girl," the general growled, and put an arm around her and kissed her brown hair.

And Alixe pushed away haughtily. "That is not a way to talk before boys. They might not understand how a girl is worth six boys, and it is not who said it. Besides, I can ride, can't I? And I can jump over the hedge by the field but just me—Alixe." And the boys nodded their dark heads and agreed.

"She can run faster than I, though my legs are so long." And he smiled at her in his sleepy fashion, honest, admiring, sly.

Things went on in this way for two years or more, and the three studied together under the tutelage of the Coq in the park, and sometimes went together on a Friday afternoon to the Valley Farm and spent a two-days there never to be forgotten. They were royal guests to Francois and La Claire, and the wholesome simple things done to amuse them were endless; the farm was theirs to play with for that week-end. First, gisot, then a fine lunch; gisot, with salad and bread and wine and much besides. The grandmother told them stories, the father took them driving on hay wagons; the mother showed them how to milk, to shell peas and other odd accomplishments. The children were ready to drop everything and do anything with them at any moment. It was the little visitors, and according to the season they gathered fruits—berries, apples, whatever grew. The ferme du Val was a fairy-land of pleasure.

Also the chateau at Viques with three children in it was no convent. That good boy Francois was forever in mischief. For instance, there was the winter's day when he got the general into difficulty with the church by brutally snowballing the bishop.

"I thought it was Marcelle," Francois explained penitently. "He pranced just as Marcelle prances. And I was hiding behind the door with my my—neat—big hard ones. It was twelve, so I could see plainly. I fired straight, my Seigneur. I gave him one in the neck. And one on the head, and two in the stomach when he turned. I missed once. And also when I turned toward him, with his hands out, I sent one into his mouth before I saw it. It was too bad it was the bishop, my Seigneur; but why didn't he fight back?"

And the seigneur, scolding ferociously, had a gleam in his eye which lessened Francois' sense of wrong-doing. There was also an occasion when, hearing the general give a long order to Marcelle for the stable, Francois went out hurriedly with a stout cord and fastened it where Marcelle rode the prancer, caught his foot and fell on Jules, the groom, in his orbit—on Jules carrying a bucket of water; and Jules and the water and the bucket ricocheted in a thousand places, and the general, who was Coq, being angry, let forth a neigh and a kick together, one of which broke the innocent Jules' arm. So that Francois, stating the case to the general, was condemned to do the groom's work till the arm was cured. The days were not monotonous at the chateau of Viques. They were not all work and no play to the three very human children living there.

So with work and play life rolled rapidly and suddenly. Life was all changed. A governess was coming for Alixe, and Francois and Pietro were going away to the great military school of Saint-Cyr, near Paris.

CHAPTER XII. The Strange Boy.

Two years slid past noiselessly, unnoticed, and it was vacation time: it was August of the year 1824. The Valley of the Jura was all about on a sea of scarlet poppies. They grew higher than the corn, and the wind tossed the waves of them against the sunlight, and the sea of them glittered silver, pricked with million golden points, then the wind tossed the thousand, thousand waves back toward the sun, and the land-sea was shadowy, streaked with flame unendingly. The little river—the Chelette—flowed down between the fields of gold and scarlet in its immortal hurry, murmuring over the stones. The old chateau of Viques—the ruin—lay back behind the corn fields and smiled in hot sunlight at the two thousandth ocean of color which had washed the land up to its crumbling walls, since the Roman governor plied the old gray stones.

A tall lad of fourteen, another boy, slighter, quicker, darker, and at a girl of eleven in a short white dress, wandered through the ruins, talking earnestly now, silent now, filling the grim place with easy laughter again. Alixe and Francois and Pietro were growing up; the general already grumbled words about kittens turning into cats, as he looked at them. Yet the general was satisfied in his soul with each one, at that fever age, and glad of each day more of this long unconscious childhood in which they held to one another as closely and frankly as if they were real sister and brothers.

Today was the first complete day of the vacation; for till now Francois had been at the farm, working hard with his father at the harvesting. This morning he had come over to spend a week at the chateau. And without arrangement, only because it was their oldest and most fascinating playground, they had strolled along the steep hillside, into the road that led to the pastures at the foot of the mountain, and the gate, barring out wagons and cattle, and the fence which enclosed the old chateau.

The grass was green on the high mountain which lay beyond the stones of the Roman tower, and long, and waved in the breeze; the ugliness of the barbarism and cruelty of those days lay so buried; on the right were the granaries where the wicked governor had stored the grain, wrung from the country people over the steep wall to the left was the opening to the corridor which led, as all the world of Viques had known for centuries, to the treasure-house; it was there that the phantom, the great dog, appeared. The children told the old story to one another; they rebuilt as they talked, in the heat of the summer afternoon, the old castle, their raised, its long walls and placed its narrow windows and machicolated its roofs—in the young minds a dream of the old place rose complete under the new chestnut trees of only two or three hundred years' standing.

"Just behind the great-stone there," Alixe formulated, "was the dog's bedroom. Of course, a great monsieur like the dog had his own bedroom—his own office, too—and maybe his dining-room."

And the joke was enough on that lazy day of vacation to set peals of light laughter ringing through the ruins. Alixe stopped laughing suddenly.

"Who is that?" she demanded. Her eyes were lifted to the hill rising behind the green mound, and the glance of the others followed hers. A young man, a boy, was coming lightly down the slope, and something in his gait and movement made it impossible even at a distance that it should be any one of the village. Strangers were rare at the chateau of Viques, and why should a stranger be over the mountain? The children were silent as they watched the figure drawing closer; it seemed as if an event of importance was about to happen. Rapidly the boy sprang down the mountainside; they could see him plainly now; he was two or three years older than the boys of the chateau; he was short, slender, compact, with a cast of his face which something about him, which the country-bred children did not understand to be that subtle quality of presence. He saw them, and came forward, and his eyes were quickly as he glanced at Alixe. But with a keen look at the three, it was Francois to whom he spoke.

"Is this Francois?" he asked. Francois answered wonderingly, and sprang down, he wondered more. The strange boy, he came flung from him, dropped on his knees and kissed the grass that grew over the Roman governor's foundations. With a gasp, he was standing again, looking at them unashamed from his quiet gray eyes.

"It is the first time I have touched the soil of France since I was seven years old," he stated, not as if to excuse his act, but as if explaining something historical. And was silent. The children, going over this day's event many times after, could never remember how it happened that they had talked so much. The strange boy talked very little; they could not collect that he asked questions; after his first startling question: was there Alixe, the very spirited and proud little Alixe, actions to make him understand everything of their own affairs.

"I am Alixe," she began—and stopped short, seized with shyness. Was it courtesy to explain to the younger stranger about her? He was looking at her, or was it bragging? She found herself suddenly in an agony of confusion, for all of them were laughing their quick young laughter at her brief statement. Then the stranger made a low bow and spoke in the gentlest friendly tones.

"It is enough. It is a charming name. Mademoiselle Alixe. I believe I shall now think it the most charming name in France."

And Alixe, blushing furiously, felt a satisfactory conviction that she had not been at all stupid.

"She has more of a name than that, however, Monsieur," and Francois stepped across and spoke to the little girl, her knight, unconscious of the part he played. "It is a very grand name, the other one. For our seigneur, the father of Alixe, is Monsieur Baron Caspard Gouraud, a general of Napoleon himself; he is indeed with the Emperor at St. Helena."

Francois had no false modesty, no self-consciousness; he felt that he had placed Alixe's standing now in the best light possible. The strange boy felt it, too, it seemed, for he started as Francois spoke of Napoleon; his reserved face brightened and his cap stepped on his feet, then Alixe started again to Alixe more deeply. Francois was delighted. It was in him to enjoy dramatic effect, as it is in most Frenchmen. He faced about to Pietro.

"Quick," he said, "he went on, much taken with himself as master of ceremonies, 'is Monsieur the Marquis Zappi of Italy. His father also fought for the great captain.' The quiet, strange boy interrupted with a low bow. 'I know the name well,' and he had Pietro's hand in a firm grasp and was looking into the lad's embarrassed face with his dreamy keen eyes."

The children, surprised, were yet too young to wonder much that a boy scarcely older than themselves should have the army of Napoleon at his disposal, and he gave them no time to think about it.

"One sees, without the names, that you are of the noblesse," he said simply, embracing the three in his shapely glance. He turned to Francois. "And you, Monsieur, the spokesman? You are also of a great Bonapartist house?"

Francois stood straight and slim; his well-knit young lad in his military dress was carried with all the assurance of an aristocrat. He smiled his brilliant exquisite smile into the boy's face.

"Me—I am a peasant," he said cheerfully. "I have no house." Then into the silence that fell he spoke simply. "There are no officers of the army here. But I know the name was known." The controlled glance of the stranger rested on him attentively. With that the look of Francois changed in a flash; his eyes blazed as he threw out both hands in a strong gesture. "It makes no difference," he cried. "My life was consecrated from its start to the service of the house of Bonaparte. It will count; and you, Monsieur, I believe that I know surely that I shall find a thing worth while for a Bonaparte."

A curious vivid glance shot at the excited boy from under the drooping lids of the newcomer. "Monsieur," he said, "I am not a Bonapartist. But I had time to hear the rest. Because Alixe had suddenly thrown her arms about Francois' neck, and was crying out impatiently words.

"He is a peasant—yes. But he is also our brother, Francois, and mine, and no prince is better than Francois not."

"Or half so good," Pietro put in with his slow tones.

"You are likely right," the stranger agreed laconically.

And then without questions asked, in rapid eager sentences, the three told him it was; how Francois, refusing to leave the cottage, was back home at the castle; how Pietro had come at the castle; how the boys were at school together; how in the vacations they were still sister and brothers, whether at the castle or the farm, all this and much more the stranger listened, and seemed to say almost nothing, yet managed to make them feel at every moment that he cared to hear what they said. With that the stranger turned to the village of Viques, and the castle, and then of the old chateau; and one told the legend of the treasure and of the guardian dog.

Just over the wall there is the opening where he appeared to old Pierre Tremblay. Francois pointed out. "And Pierre was half brother ever after. I know, for I have seen him myself. He mumbled."

"That is interesting." The stranger spoke with an emotion than he had shown before—he was, after all, all of his reserve, a boy. "I should like an interview with that dog. I must at least see his kennel. Over the wall? I will climb the wall."

"But no," Francois said quickly. "It is unsafe these last five years. I have climbed it, but not in these last years. You can go around and get in another way and see the hole of the dog."

The older boy's eyes narrowed. "I think I should prefer to climb the wall," he said.

Alixe spoke. "If Francois can not go it is impossible. He is the best climber of all the country, are you not then, Francois?"

"Yes," said Francois. "And Pietro echoed. 'But yes. All the world knows it.'"

"I think I should like to climb the wall," the stranger repeated gently. And he did. The others watching anxiously, he crawled out on the uncertain pliant feet in the air. A big stone crashed behind him; he crawled on. Then, "I see it," he cried, and waved a triumphant hand, and with that there was a hoarse rumble of loosened masonry, and down came the great blocks close to his hands. He was slipping—he had jumped. And as he jumped a heavy square of stone tumbled with him and caught him, felled him, had him pinned into the tumbling wall by his coat. And, above the wall swayed. Then, in the instant of time before the catastrophe, Francois had sprung like a cat into the center of danger and loosened the force he pushed the other boy, violently reeling, across the grass out of harm's way.

Alixe screamed once sharply. Francois lay motionless on his face and the great stones rained around him. It was all over in a moment; in a moment more a shout of joy rose from Pietro, for Francois lifted his head and began crawling difficultly with Pietro's help, out of the debris. There was a cut on his cheek, a deep one, bleeding badly, on the back of his hand, and bruises were distributed over him, but by a miracle he had come off with his life and only so much the worse. No sooner was Francois on his feet than Alixe started him by turning on the innocent and surprised Pietro in a perfect fury of scorn.

"He is not dead—but that is not your fault," she threw at him. "You who love him so much! You let him go into that danger."

"But—but I didn't know he was going. Alixe," stammered Pietro. "It was so quick."

"Quick?" Yes, Francois was quick. Why weren't you quick too? It is always Francois. Why don't you do something brave once in a while? Why don't you make people admire you not always Francois?"

"I like people to admire Francois," Pietro answered sturdily. "I admire him, too." Then, his shyness lost in eagerness to set the case right with Alixe, he went on. "Francois always has a thing done before I think of it. That is not my fault. I believe I should not have been afraid to do that—but—Francois did it."

"It is always so," said Alixe in deep disgust. "Francois always does it. If you would only prove once that you have courage."

Dinner Stories

Conversation turned to the enduring terms occasionally used by husband and wife, and Congressman John A. Mitchell of Massachusetts said that it reminded him of an incident that happened in Boston.

A children's aid society was having a meeting one afternoon a short time ago, and during the session one of the women workers asked one of the little girls present what her father's name was.

"Smith," answered the youngster. "Smith, is it?" returned the woman.

"And what is his Christian name?"

"He ain't got none," answered the little girl, who hadn't the faintest idea what a Christian name was.

"Call her surely must have," insisted the woman. "What does your mother call him?"

"Bonehead," was the startling rejoinder of the youngster.

CURED TERRIBLE HUMOR ON FACE

Could Not Go On Street Without Veil. Tells What Resinol Did For Her.

Philadelphia, Dec. 6, 1912.—"In December 1908, my face became sore. I tried everything that was recommended, and my face got worse instead of better. I spent over $100 and got no benefit. The face and nose were very red and the eruption had the appearance of small boils, which itched me terribly. I cannot tell you how terrible my face looked. All I can say is, it was dreadful, and I suffered beyond description."

"I have not gone on the street any time since 1908 without a veil, until now. Just four months ago a friend persuaded me to give Resinol a trial. I have used three cakes of Resinol Soap and less than a jar of Resinol Ointment, and my face is perfectly free from any eruption, and my skin is as clear and clean as any child's." (Signed) Mrs. M. J. Bateman, 4256 Viola St.

Every druggist sells Resinol Ointment and Resinol Soap. But if you have any skin trouble it will cost you nothing to try them. Send to Dept. 14-M, Resinol, Baltimore, Md., for a free sample of each.

very quick wit. A man in the course of an animated conversation, noticing that Mr. Wilson's eyeglasses were perched near the tip of his nose, remarked:

"Your glasses, governor, are almost in your mouth."

"That's all right," was the quick response. "I want to see what I'm talking about."

Small Boy's Essay.

A youthful American citizen for the time being resident in Germany was asked to observe Independence day by writing "a patriotic American composition." Bobby chose "The Cow" for his subject, and this was the essay he turned out: "The cow is an animal. She has two horns and four legs and a tail. Sometimes this tail waves. Long may it wave o'er the land of the tree and the home of the brave!"

There's many a nice boy that goes into the ash can they might make some pore little tot happy.
